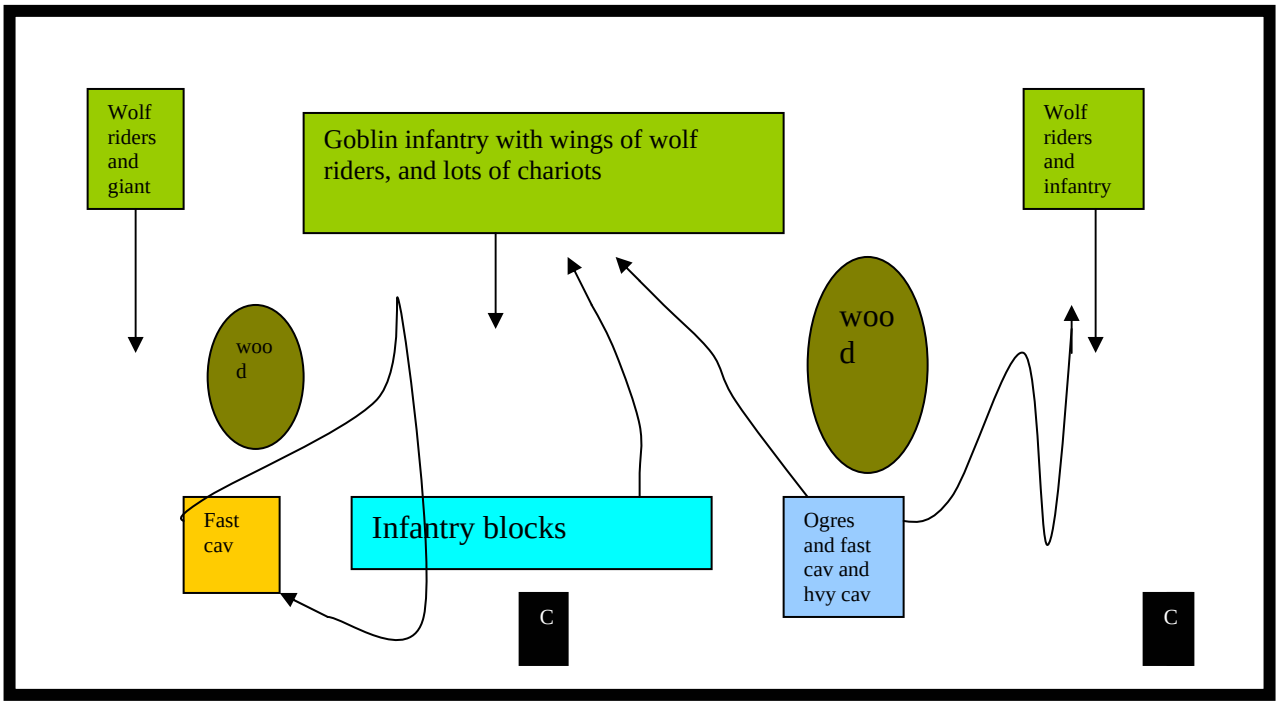
Bloodbath of the Twin Woods 28th Feb 2003

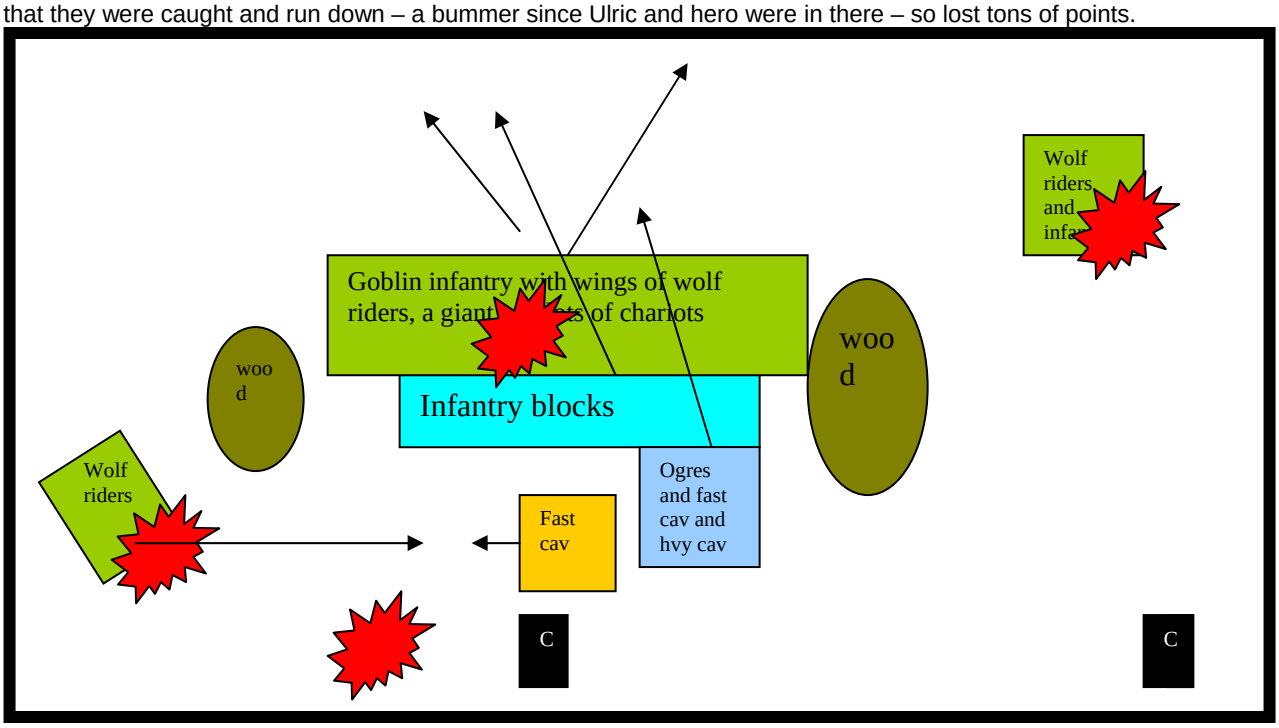
EDIT: I have no recollection of this game at all, unless it was at a rogue trader tournament in NJ (which actually it wasn't)



He came round both wings – I started going around the right wing and then decided to switch back inside and into an opening my Norse and ogres had made – running down a unit he had set up for me to charge. But I hit them in front and flank – and my flank unit was bigger – so they fled from them – leading me straight into his main unit with general which I eventually ran down.

A unit of pikes fled from the giant off table. Skirmishers took both woods but were quickly killed.

The hvy cav came back through the middle and I had them flee from a charge – but they rolled so badly (3d6 got something like 5) that they were caught and run down – a bummer since Ulric and hero were in there – so lost tons of points.



The battle was kind of like this at the end – he had 300 points left and I had 760.